Any driver who has finished a race in a qualifying event within the last 3 years is included above. Rank and point changes are from the most recent pre-WBC ranking.

Points are derived from race results factoring in that series' format. A race win generically is worth 100 points but qualifying races, F2 and F3 race results are discounted. Typically results only score points if they contribute to that person's ability to succeed in that series, so qualifying races tend to score points only through 4th and the driver's best qualifying results counts more then other qualifying results.

Points for any given series are scaled so that a perfect result (wins in all races scored) would equal 100. Total points over the last 3 years is the sum of the points from all events entered.

A driver's final score is their total points from the last 3 years' events divided by the number of events they entered. Drivers participating in fewer then 3 events have their points halved.

Note that finishes for F2 and F3 PBeM participants are scaled to compensate for the tiered competition. Results in F2 are effectively doubled and results in F3 are quadrupled. So a win in F2 is counted as a 2nd and a win in F3 is counted as a 4th. * I have championship numbers back through 1991, but only have specific race results from 2007. So career championship counts go back to 1991 but the rest of the career numbers only date from 2007 onward.
